

PONGALO PONGAL!

Campbell Lane at Little India was transformed into a little harvest "village" for Pongal Festival this year. Children were thrilled with the petting pen complete with cows and goats. A bullock cart was the main attraction at the festival village as people took turns to be photographed on it. Stalls selling mud pots, sugar cane and Pongal festive goodies were thronged with people preparing for the harvest celebration. The annual Pongal colouring contest attracted many enthusiastic participants. The event was jointly organised by the Hindu Endowments Board with grassroots organization, LISHA.

Visitors to Sri

Vairavimada Kaliamman Temple were pleasantly surprised by the new look of the temple since it got a paint job late last year. The soft pastel hues on the exterior walls of the temple add to the magnificence of the century year old temple.
